the Winning of the Women's Team Pursuit Title
at the 3rd Stage of the ISU World Cup Speed Skating

On December 5, Nana Takagi of Nidec Sankyo and two other members of the Japanese national team won the women's team pursuit gold medal at the third stage of the International Skating Union's World Cup Speed Skating held in Inzell, Germany.

The victory marked the first time in 11 seasons since the Japanese national team took home a World Cup gold medal in the women's team pursuit in January 2005. Nana Takagi exhibited strong and consistent laps in the race and contributed significantly to the victory of her team, which beat the Dutch national team, the winner of the title in the 2014 Winter Olympic Games in Sochi, Russia.
