

Nidec Holds Eco-class at Elementary School

Nidec held an eco-class on February 04, 2015 at Kyoto's municipal Momoyama Minami Elementary School. The class, titled "What we can do with motors for the global environment," taught the school's students about motors, their impact to the global environment, and Nidec's environmental actions, and then had the students discuss what they as individuals can do for the global environment.

The Momoyama Minami Elementary School's students are very active, with many of them raising their hands to answer questions in this photo.

The students are making motors by themselves in the class, which aims to have students know how wonderful and fun it is to make things.

The class was educational to Nidec staff as well, who, after seeing many students with a smile on their faces, learned the importance of heart-to-heart communication.
